Ruth King's Image Response
October 27, 2022

Utilizing the main sentence used by Ruth King "Racism is a heart disease, and it's curable", I depicted a heart that is sick but still functioning in a pretty but not perfect world. The heart and the world are held by a web in the background. The web is all humanity that is interconnected, we are all one and at the same time we are all individual and different entities. Among us there is a lot of love but also many little bugs that make our heart sick. When we become more aware and educated of our connection and at the same time our differences, the bugs may disappear, and we might be able to live in harmony and less uncomfortable hate.
