

Art for Child Final Project: Pieces of Humanity

Pieces of Humanity, Anier Colon-Flores, 2022

As art continues to progressively consume the world around us, we begin to emerge from such art forms and become one with society, humanity, and the world. Art comes in many forms when it comes to expression, especially when discussing strong topics such as diversity and multiculturalism. In this specific poster, the ideals of minorities within diversity are expressed. I used elements such as teared paper, water color in earth and skin tones, one-line face sketches using a black marker, and acrylic to create a piece that comes together to express multiculturalism. Each boho-like abstract shape depicts a person of color, whether this be a minority or gender. The heart is constructed through unity and form, created by ripping paper and gluing it together, again, each color in the center representing a person in humanity. Lastly, the globe below depicts itself. Overall, this image is important to me because it depicts the different types of people on this earth and how beautiful it is when we can come together as one. We might not be made or “ripped” from the same sheet of paper, but somehow, we can still come together to create something beautiful. I feel like many would understand the image to be representative of the cultures that fill our society today. As time passes by, not only do we recognize that we are not one in the same, but unity is very important to function throughout our time here. I find this to be very important, due to the things that have occurred and continue to occur in the nation. There’s a lot of divide but no one talking about what we can do to bridge that gap. Instead of recognizing each of us for our flaws, there should be a moment in we should come together and share our similarities and express our differences. That is what makes this nation and world a better place.
